

ABSTRACT

A method for managing program data includes deriving a code word from an entitlement control message in the program data. The code word is re-scrambled with a local key. The code word that was re-scrambled with the local key is inserted into the entitlement control message.